The four-storey residential building designed by architect R. A. Pflug in 1872 with a history of more than 150 years has now acquired the status of a protected cultural monument of the state. Having come under the control of new owners, it is now regaining its elegance and returning to the pearl of the park-surrounded Riga city centre.

Project "Krišjāņa Valdemāra" is undoubtedly a wonderful place for true lovers of European historical cities who have arranged their own home, as well as for investors who understand the importance of the location of the house in the long-term value of the property.
