The house is located in the region of Eretria on Euboea. Consists of five levels. The first level consists of a living room, a kitchen with dining area, bedroom and one bathroom. The second level consists of one bedroom, one Office and two bathrooms. The third level is the living room, kitchen with dining area and a bathroom. At the fourth level, three bedrooms and two bathrooms. On the fifth level a playroom, and a gym with a Jacuzzi. In the yard there is a place to build a swimming pool. Also the courtyard has a private wooden house, with a total area of 105 square meters. Evia is the second largest Greek island after Crete, also known as Euboea, is located in 80 km. to the North of Athens and stretches along the northern coast of Attica. It is located so close to the Mainland, that is connected with it by a 14-metre bridge. The alternating movement of water takes place continuously for thousands of years. As legend has it, Aristotle drowned, trying to solve this riddle.
